Spring Weather Preparation

Spring can bring a myriad of weather conditions upon us within a rapid sequence. Storms, wind events, and flooding are just a few events that come to mind. The best way to weather a storm, pun intended, is to be prepared at home, work, and while traveling. A few common tips to assist you in your preparation.

- Have the following readily available: a battery-operated flashlight, a battery-operated NOAA Weather Radio, and extra batteries for both
- An emergency evacuation plan, including a map of your home and, for every type of severe weather emergency, routes to safety from each room
- A list of important personal information, including, but not limited to:
 - telephone numbers of neighbors, family, and friends
 - insurance and property information
 - telephone numbers of utility companies
 - medical information
- A first aid kit (bandages, gauze, antibiotic ointment, tourniquet, etc.)
- A 3–5 day supply of bottled water and nonperishable food
- Personal hygiene items, blankets, and sleeping bags
- An emergency kit in your vehicle

Flooded areas are a danger to life and health. One should never enter a flooded roadway in a vehicle. It takes very little moving water to sweep a vehicle off the roadway and into danger. Ditches, retention areas, and standing flood waters present inherent dangers as well and can trap you in life threatening situations. Moving water, our river included, never gets tired and can harm individuals. Cold water will produce hypothermia rapidly. If the air temperature and water temperatures are less than 140 degrees combined, you are at risk of hypothermia. The use life jackets and the buddy system when navigating waterways is a life-saving practice.

Enjoy the outdoors, with an eye towards safety and preparation.
